Ready for Food Contact Compliance

Event Summary

The dynamic regulatory landscape and increasing number of regulations, present a challenge for companies developing and manufacturing food packaging or other food contact products or materials. Each company involved in the production process of a food contact substance, material or article is responsible for the compliance of his end product. For these stakeholders it is important to know their obligations and to be able to demonstrate compliance.

On European level there are general obligations for all kind of food contact materials, a general "Good Manufacturing Practice" directive, a comprehensive regulation for plastic materials, a directive on the restriction of recycled plastic materials, among others.

For several materials, such as paper and board, colorants, pigments and inks, regulations do exist on European Member state level. Additional to this, for numerous materials industry guidelines are available to check the safety of these materials.

This seminar will provide guidance on how to handle these complicated compliance matters.

Who should attend?

Regulatory affairs, product marketing, development and management, product compliance, quality and safety management, business development, supply chain management and purchasers from the chemical, food, packaging and other food contact materials industries.
